Violence in television and its influence upon people under 18

Abstract

Violence in television and its influence upon people under 18. Commonly observed aggressiveness and the growing number of juvenile delinquents as well as reports on children bullying other children make it necessary to seriously challenge the problem of the influence of TV violence upon children and adolescents. The analyses presented herein are an attempt to look at the relation from a psychological and pedagogical perspective.

Key words: television, violence, family, television vs. children and adolescents, the psychology of the media
